In this vicinity a light breeze sprang up and the air begau to lighten about one o'clock r. m., the sun first appearing like a pink ball amid yellow cushions, and later in the day shining with nearly his usual brightness. The day was an uncomfortable one physically, and in the afternoon the heat became intense. Many persons, especially ladies, were made ill, nausea and a dull headache being the prevailing symptoms.

The only reasonable theory advanced locally or elsewhere to account for this phenomenon is that it was caused by the smoke from distant forest fires, with an underlying or overlying canopy of fog, which together produced the strange effect. Just at night, on Monday, it was noticed that hereabouts a dense smoke or haze had settled down, obscuring the outline of even the near-by hills.

In some places female mill operatives were so frightened that they stopped work and went home in affright. At Hanover, N. H., the sky overhead was of a light olive, shading off all around to a livid green at the horizon. The light was of a quite pronounced yellowish green color. C. F. Emerson, professor of natural philosophy and astronomy, at Dartmouth College, says the cause must be something in the atmosphere which absorbs the shorter and longer wave lengths, leaving only those which give the color of yellow and green. He thinks it may be owing to the pollon from fir and pine trees; together with smoke from the forest fires in Canada. In Norwich, Coun., the gas in many places of business was lighted at midday. In many places cattle ceased feeding, and hens went to roost. In Providence, R. I., the supply of gas gave out, through some mistake went to roost. In Providence, R. L., the supply of gas gave out, through some mistake at the works, early in the afternoon, and for a time the city was left in uncomfortable darkness. In Contocook, N. H., lamps were lighted at midday, and insects sounded their evening notes. There was the same peculiar atmosphere at Block Island, at Hartford, Conn., and all the way to Portland, Me., and St. Albans, this state. Lamps were lighted in railroad trains, schools were dismissed and business generally suspended, except when gas or lamps were used.

"The morning of the day was overcast with clouds, and rainy; before 9 o'clock the rain in a great measure cessed, the clouds appeared more agitated, and the air began to darkon. For several hours in the middle of the day the obscurity was so great that those who had good eyesight could scarcely see to read common print; the birds and fowls in many places retired to their rocets as though it had been actually night, and people were obliged to light candles to dine by. It was the judgment of many that at 12 o'clock (the time of the greater, if so great, as that of bright moon light. During the whole time a sickly melaor choly gloom overcast the face of nature. VERMONT NEWS.

—A note from the managers says: The annual meeting of the Vermont state agricultural society, which takes place at Prospect Park, Montpeller, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 13, 14, 15 and 16, promises to be one of the largest and most interesting of any ever held in the state. The premium list has been increased, new improvements are ordered, and every effort made for the comfort of exhibitors and visitors. The company has done a large amount of judicious advertising, the several railroads have made low excursion rates and will bring a vast crowd to the exhibition, and all combined will make the state fair the great event of the season. The roces, on Wednesday, Thursday, and especially Friday, will undoubtedly be the most exciting the state has seen. The foral hall promises to be more attractive than usual, and will embrace every variety of woman's work, technique a large display of decervities are will embrace every variety of woman's work, including a large display of decorative art, needlawork, and a large number of inventions. DIVAL—THE DAILY BOUTINE—INSPECTION—ORAND REVIEW—SOME PLARANT THINGS SAID OF THE BRATTLEBORD BOYS.

RUTLAND, Vt., Sept. 9, 1881.

Mr. Editor:—Perhaps a few words ragarding the encampment of the National Guard of Vermont, at Camp Barstow, will be acceptable to some of the readers of The Promitics, and especially so the mention of the two companies from Brattleboro, which most certainly do credit to that place. All the companies of the Regiment and the Fuller Battery arrived here shortly before neon on Tuesday. The Fuller Batter, with about 50 horses and 80 men, and the Estey Guard started from Brattleboro at 6 A. M., arriving at Bellows Falls 38 minutes later, and at Retland about 11 o'clock. They immediately proceeded to the camp, which is situated about a mile and a half from the depot. The Hattery's quarters are situated about 00 rolls from the Infantry. The boys found everything in readiness, the detail under Sergt. Hannon having made things comfortable. The first day was devoted to getting things in readiness. The first night was very quiet, only a small guard boing kept, but even with this some of the new ones were a little timid, evidently having strange fancies of golden life. Siddons tells pleasant stories of ghosts; Shields not even once opens an eye, and declares that the guidon was asleep for eleven long hours, while Maxham's "That's so, and that's all there is to it," occasionally relieved the monotony of the occasion. This is enough regarding the Battery. (P. S. Brace had a remarkable experience with watermelous.)

The several changes which have been made in the Regiment do not seem to affect it materially, certainly not for the worse. Under Col. Greenleaf and Lieut-Col. Estey it has kept up to its usual standard and never was in better condition than it is to-day. Vermont has reason to feel proud of it. The boys are called up at 5:30 a. M., when the roll is called and every man must be present or accounted for—and it is pretty hard accounting for some. Guard mount at 9 a. M., buttalion drill at 2 c ple who were intensely interested in the fine spectacle, which won praises from several regular army officers who witnessed it. To try to describe the companies separately would be too great a task, and I therefore only make this general mention.

The camp is delightful, and the company streets are very pretty, several of them having awnings stretched from end to end. The best-are those of the Ransom, Kingsley, Capitol and Estey Guards. The latter company have really the best looking quarters of any in the Regiment and the largest company, and they are not to be discounted on drilling. Perhaps I could better describe that company's ability by the remarks of some regular army officers, who, after paying a compliment to the Fuller Battery, said that the Eatey Guard was the finest company in the Regiment, and upon inquiry I found the reason to be that the men each take a lively interest in their company. They have a new son to be that the men such take a lively in-terest in their company. They have a new awning recently purchased at a cost of about $50, and some 15 handsome lanterns with their menogram, all of which adorn their company street. The Regiment leaves Rut-land to-day. (From the Golden Rule, Boston.)

The Sency of Triessph is, to our thinking, just the book that any good teacher would choose for his class or choir. The elements of music are clearly explained, and the exercises are interesting and complete. The Concert and Secular Department contains a large variety of glees and four-part songs, which are of exceeding merit and will delight the singing-school and social circle. The hymn times from Dykes, Mock, Barnby, and other celebrated English writers, have been chosen with fine discrimination and are entirely new to our American singers. The compositions of been chosen with fine discrimination and are entirely new to cut American singers. The compositions of the authors of this work (Mesars, R. P. Wright and A.
